In both the classroom and the community in general, Hurtwood offers a unique preparation for life after school – a real stepping-stone between school and university.

Life at Hurtwood is close to that of a university campus. While always under the pastoral care of the Housemaster and his staff, students earn and are granted respect and freedom of choice. Hurtwood treats students as responsible adults, and responsible adults they prove to be. Hurtwood School is located in Surrey, England and was founded by Richard Jackson in 1970. The school is dedicated to providing students with a professional

A-Level course, which features a combination of arts disciplines and basic subject education to prepare students for entry into the university and future life. With its first-class teaching quality and excellent academic performance, Hurtwood Middle School has consistently ranked within the top 50 private schools in the UK. In addition to excellent academic performance, another typical feature of the school is art education. As a first-class performance and artistic creation centre, the school not only provides special A-Level courses in performing, singing, drawing, fashion design and film production, but also provides students with the opportunity to perform professionally on various occasions.
