Delivering high standards is a genuine hallmark of the School.

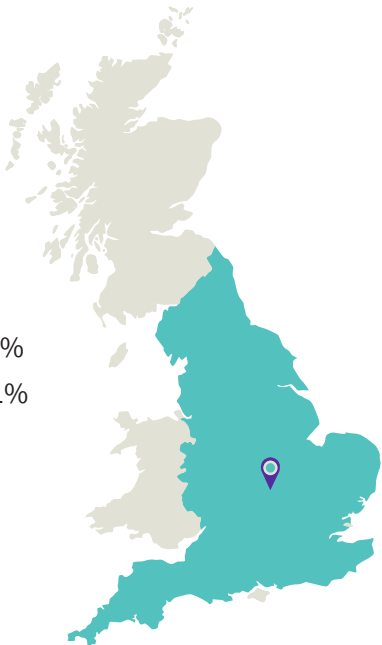

Since turning co-educational in 1972, Akeley has been at the heart of quality education in Buckinghamshire. Set over three sites in the best of the English countryside, the School prides itself on the cooperative nature of the students' rapport with the school staff who they get to know and trust.

The A-level results show that excellent teaching in small classes helps the students to achieve their full potential, thus maximising their opportunities to attend the top universities. The School puts a great deal of attention on playing to the strengths of each and every individual pupil. Small classes enables students to realise their full potential and maximising their chances of being admitted to a top university.
