Occupying stately Pitsford Hall, built in 1764, and its wonderful gardens, the School is an independent English grammar school which offers an academic curriculum that prepares students for university and life beyond study.

Under the current Headmaster, Pitsford has gained a great reputation, winning plaudits in the Financial Times and making rapid progress towards the top of UK school rankings. Classes are deliberately kept small to ensure the best personal tuition. The curriculum draws on the best of the grammar school traditions of the past, makes them relevant to today's needs, and ensures that they are applicable to the demands of the future.

Pitsford School, formerly known as the Northampton Grammar School, is a small, traditional school with royal character. It used to be the estate of the famous British banker James Money and was later reclaimed by the government as a school. The Royal family was very close to the school, the Earl of Wales, the family of Princess Diana and the Queen's family members were frequent guests. The Queen's Mother studied horseback riding in the grounds of the school. The school aims to help students prepare for university and life. It provides a large number of extra-curricular activities in order to open up the students' cultural perspectives and tap into the students' leadership potential and innovative spirit.
